

Gettysburg National Bank to Retire $100,000 in Preferred Stock; Elects 2 New Directors

Vote by Stockholders
Increases Capital
To $250,000.

ALL OFFICERS ARE RE-ELECTED

Stockholders of the Gettysburg National Bank voted in favor of a simplification of the capital structure of the institution and increased the number of members on the board of directors from 14 to 16 at their annual meeting Tuesday afternoon at the York street banking house.

The revision of the capital set-up had been considered by the board of directors last year and that body sent a recommendation to the stockholders to adopt the program at their meeting Tuesday.

Bank Capital Increased

The plan, which was adopted and will be put into operation, calls for the retiring of $100,000 in preferred "B" stock by issuing $125,000 common stock at par, or $5 per share. Of this amount $100,000 will be used to pay and retire the $100,000 preferred stock and the remaining $25,000 will be added to the capital, raising the bank capital to $275,000, the point it had reached prior to changes on August 6, 1934, in the capital set-up. By this means all of the capital of the bank will be common stock and of equal value. Last September the bank paid off its $100,000 loan from the RFC.

It was explained that the $5,000 previously paid as the dividend on the preferred stock will pay the four per cent annual dividend rate on the new common stock, so that there will be no added burden on the earnings of the institution through the issuance of the new stock. Law requires that the new common stock must be offered pro rata to the holders of the present common stock. The shareholders may either subscribe for their allotted shares of the new issue or sell their right to subscribe.

At the meeting Tuesday the Rev. D. W. Woods presided as chairman and Miss Ellen Tipton acted as secretary.

Two New Directors Named

The two new directors are C. A. Bixler and Dr. W. S. Mountain. The following were re-elected to membership on the board for another year: C. W. Johnson, Dr. C. H. Huber, G. R. Thompson, W. E. Houck, Charles H. Smith, Dorsey Dougherty, H. B. Bender, H. W. Deardoff, C. J. Toot, Charles B. Dougherty, Dr. C. G. Crist, C. A. Willis, E. L. Golden and J. William Kendlehart.

At the election 18,515 of 20,000 shares of preferred stock were voted and 20,251 of 25,000 shares of common stock.

After the stockholders' meeting, the newly elected directors met at 3 o'clock to organize. All former officers were re-named to their positions as follows: C. A. Willis, president; C. J. Toot, vice president; I. C. Bucher, cashier; Charles W. Ogden, assistant cashier, and John W. Hewitt, trust officer. All bank employees were re-elected to their former positions.

WIFE FORGIVES SPOUSE HELD IN SHOOTING CASE

Cyrus Sites, Fountaindale, Is Freed After Hearing; To Pay Costs.

CHARGED WITH THREATENING 3

A reconciliation between man and wife Tuesday evening in the office of Justice of the Peace John H. Basehore brought an end to all of the troubles of Cyrus Sites, Fountaindale, that have been heaped upon him since he admittedly imbibed too heavily Saturday evening and did dangerous things with a loaded shotgun.

Although she still bore a black eye, which she said was a reminder of a disagreement she had with her husband in the early hours of Sunday morning after the shotgun episode, Mrs. Ada Sites agreed to forgive and forget and signed a $22 note with her husband to guarantee the payment of the costs in the case after the charges against the latter had been withdrawn.

Sites, the man who blasted a six-inch hole in the front door of his home with a shotgun Saturday evening while he threatened occupants of the house, was arrested Sunday morning by Sheriff B. W. Spence and Private Richard O. North of the state police on a charge of surety of the peace laid before the local justice by Martin Wilhide, Smithburg, R. 2, Maryland, whose attentions to a step-daughter of Cyrus Sites had been strenuously objected to by the latter.

Sites had remained in jail until the hearing Tuesday evening. When he went to the justice's office, Wilhide proceeded to file another charge against him. This time the Maryland man charged Sites with assault with intent to kill.

A hearing was held on the surety of the peace count during which Wilhide, Mrs. Sites and the step-daughter, Edna Sites, told of exciting events in the Sites home last Saturday night. They said Sites had pointed a shotgun and snapped it twice before it finally discharged, the charge passing over a coal oil lamp on the center table, snuffing out the flame, although the lamp was undamaged. When the justice wanted to know why someone wasn't hit by the load from the gun if it had been pointed so threateningly, there was no satisfactory answer.

Sites admitted that he had been drinking and declared that he remembered nothing of the events of the evening except that he had been drinking heavily before going home about 10 o'clock that evening.

As the hearing drew to a close, Justice Basehore was called from the office on another matter of business and he left the prisoner and his accusers in the hands of Sheriff Spence. When he returned he found that peace had been made and Wilhide was ready to drop the charges. The sheriff obligingly agreed to accept a note for the costs.

Miss Louise Eby, Littlestown, was admitted to the Annie M. Warner hospital Tuesday evening where she submitted to an operation for acute appendicitis. Today her condition was reported to be as good as can be expected.

FAMED EXPLORER H. S. ADDITION DIES OF INJURIES DEPENDS ON VOTE

Martin Johnson Hurt in Plane Crash Near Los Angeles; Wife in Hospital.

Los Angeles, Jan. 13 (AP)—A world-famous explorer, Martin Johnson, who year after year braved the dangers of wildest Africa, came to his death in a routine homeland air trip not long after he remarked that "America probably is the most dangerous place" in the world.

He died today in a hospital, the second fatality among the 13 passengers and crew of a Salt Lake City—Los Angeles Western air transport which pancaked on snow-clad foothills within 15 miles of its destination.

James A. Braden, Cleveland ink manufacturer, was killed instantly. "I actually feel unsafe away from the jungles," his wife and inseparable companion had said shortly before they boarded the ill-fated liner at Salt Lake City.

She was seriously injured and uninformed of her husband's death. The 52-year-old Johnson laughingly had remarked that "he nearly had been killed by a Salt Lake City taxi."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were air pilots.

They flew in darkest Africa. Uncharted were their courses. No radio beams, no light beacons. They landed in the veldt and wild animals clawed at their ships.

Co-pilot Clifford P. Owens and A. L. Loomis, Omaha, Nebraska, were critically hurt, but none of those riding in the big all-steel craft escaped without some injury.

NOTARY PUBLIC CONFIRMED

Contagious Diseases in '36 Only One-Fourth of '35 Total

Total of 472 Cases in 1935 as Compared With 120 Last Year.

CONTAGIOUS diseases reported in Gettysburg during the year 1936 were only about one-fourth as numerous as in 1935, the report of Borough Health Officer Erle R. Deardoff revealed today. In 1935, there were 472 cases of contagious diseases placed under quarantine here, while last year the figure reached the lowest point in years at 120.

The total of all contagious ailments reported here last year is far less than the number of cases of measles alone in the preceding year.

Borough to Get Report

Mr. Deardoff's report, which will be presented to the borough council at its February meeting, shows that there were only two deaths from "catching" ailments last year while 1935 listed three from those causes. Meningitis and scarlet fever caused one death each last year. Meningitis, scarlet fever and diphtheria claimed one apiece in 1935. Cases reported and quarantined

$15,000 Sought to Erect Building at Biglerville; Citizens to Ballot.

Biglerville voters will decide at a special election to be held Tuesday, January 26, whether the bonded indebtedness of the borough school district shall be increased to the extent of $15,000 to finance the construction of a four-room addition to the high school building. Decision to carry the matter to the voters was reached at a recent meeting of the Biglerville school board.

The one-story brick addition would house a science laboratory, a commercial room, a home economics room and a general work shop. If the bond issue is approved, the work will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible so that proposed additions to the curriculum may be made for the 1937-38 school year.

New Oxford citizens will vote next Tuesday, January 19, on a proposed $25,000 bond issue. If approved the funds will be used to build an addition to the high school building there. The work is to be undertaken as a WPA project.

Members of the Gettysburg fire company will address the class and give demonstrations.

Scarlet fever	63	6
Whooping cough	10	0
Typhoid fever	0	2

Totals 472 120
Mr. Deardoff also reports that he listed 123 nuisances in the borough during last year and issued 81 school permits. He gives 172 as the number of health permits filed and states that 12 wage earners' permits were filed during the year.

Expenses Reduced

Expenses of the board of health for the year amounted to $386.40 in 1936 as compared with $425.05 for the preceding year. The 1936 costs were itemized as follows: Salary to health officer and secretary, $360; telephone rent and tolls, $24.40; and postage, $2.

Mr. Deardoff reports no unusual number of contagious diseases under quarantine here now. The most serious reports received recently are occasional cases of chicken pox.

NEW C. OF C. IS STARTED HERE; NEED IS SHOWN

Sixteen Charter Members Discuss Problems Confronting Gettysburg.

STATE OFFICIALS TO SPEAK SOON

Informal discussion on a program for the advancement of Gettysburg interests, both locally and nationally, followed designation of sixteen businessmen and citizens as charter members of the Chamber of Commerce, re-organization of which was started at a meeting in the fire engine house, Tuesday evening.

C. A. Bixler, presided as temporary chairman and Fred Pfeffer served as acting secretary.

In addition to the two acting officers, these persons—charter members—were present:

Edmund W. Thomas, Clyde D. Berger, M. J. Flynn, Dr. R. M. Lewis, William G. Weaver, Charles E. Weaver, Fred Faber, Stewart H. Moyer, Radford Lipsey, Henry M. Scharf, Wilbur J. Stallsmith, J. Calvin Nau, George Naylor and P. W. Stallsmith.

In the motion declaring those persons present as charter members, it also was stated that the choice of a board of directors and officers will be made at a later meeting.

To Meet Officials

It was the consensus of the meeting that a representative of the Pennsylvania Chamber of Commerce be invited here to aid in starting Gettysburg's organization. O. N. Ritzman, secretary of the Pennsylvania scenic and historic commission, also will be invited to speak at a meeting of the group, probably next week.

Through the only other motion made Tuesday evening, the members of the embryo chamber decided to make membership voluntary and refrain from solicitations at this time.

The actual business of the re-organization meeting was conducted in a short time, but the charter members held a round table discussion on the problems of Gettysburg in the past and those that might be expected in the future as concerning the Chamber of Commerce.

Everyone present expressed a view that Gettysburg needs this civic organization and that everything should be done to make it successful.

Conditions Explained

Some of the remarks of the charter members disclosed these facts and conditions:

Every day there are requests being received here for information about Gettysburg and the battlefield from prospective visitors, but

7 MOTORISTS ARE ARRESTED

Speeding Is Most Prevalent Charge Laid by Gettysburg Patrolmen.

Three arrests were made by highway patrolmen from the local sub-station Tuesday afternoon for motor code violations and charges will be laid before nearby justices of the peace.

Floyd King, Orrtanna, is to be charged with parking on the highway near Blue Ridge Summit.

Two Dauphin county drivers were nabbed. Frank A. Yaros, Middletown, will be charged with driving over the center line of the highway, north of Hanover on the road leading to Abbottstown, and J. D. Stone-sifer, Harrisburg, is alleged to have ignored a stop sign in Abbottstown. Four other arrests were made Tuesday afternoon for speeding on the Gettysburg-Harrisburg road. Margaret S. Yeasted, Pottsville, has been charged with driving at the rate of 58 miles an hour; Mary G. Engle, Bausman, Lancaster county, 57 miles an hour; J. Charles Brenize, Mowersville, Franklin county, 54 miles an hour, and Reuben R. Hoover, Harrisburg, 64 miles an hour.

Divorce Sought on Grounds of Desertion

A libel in divorce was filed Tuesday afternoon at the office of Prothonotary C. Arthur Brame by John P. Butt, Esq., counsel for Mrs. Edna Miller Fidler, Straban township, in her suit against her husband, Ray B. Fidler, whose last known address was Greencastle, Indiana. The divorce is asked on grounds of desertion. The couple was married December 28, 1925. The libel was made returnable February 15.

To Ask for $500,000
To Promote State's Scenic Advantages

The Pennsylvania scenic and historic commission will ask the 1937 legislature for an appropriation of $500,000 to be used in a two-year program of advertising Pennsylvania's scenic, historic, industrial and agricultural advantages.

An effort will also be made by the commission to give the commission a wider scope of activities. The commission's tentative program for the 1937-38 biennial includes extensive newspaper, magazine and radio advertising.

The Monroe county Chamber of Commerce, with 1,000 members, adopted a resolution approving the commission's half-million dollar program. A group of newspapermen, civic, and business organization representatives at a meeting in Wilkes-Barre adopted a similar resolution. This proposed advertising program was endorsed also at a meeting in Gettysburg.

New C. of C. Is Started Here;
Need Is Shown

There is no agency equipped to take care of the correspondence.

The convention bureau of the past Chamber of Commerce secured several meetings in the last few years, but has since become inactive. The opportunity for entertaining military organizations during the year of 1938 is present, due to the 75th anniversary and reunion of the Civil war veterans here then. Gettysburg can make next year a "jubilee year," if the right action is taken for its promotion.

There is need for quick support of the Lincoln highway association in its plan to improve the highway so as to make it attractive to tourists and diminish the threat of the proposed "tunnel route."

Slow Progress Desired
Several new industries were anxious to receive information relative to the possibility of their locating plants here, but there was no agency that could answer their requests. It was pointed out that through very little work on the part of the right organization, which should be a Chamber of Commerce—new businesses might be attracted here.

Before adjourning the chamber members agreed that their policy would be one of slow but sure progress, and that they would make the best use possible of the material for organizing a "going" chamber before attempting a "too ambitious" program. They decided, that by learning to "creep first, and then run," more good may be done for Gettysburg and a stronger foundation laid for a successful Chamber of Commerce.

WOMAN FINDS PROFESSION
IN TREE EXPERIMENT

Pensacola, Fla. (AP)—Mrs. Anna M. Shaffer, "gentlewoman farmer" and authority on Satsuma orange culture, finds herself in that position because of her confessed inability to "just sit here and waste my time."

Widowed in 1926, she determined to try her hand at horticulture, although she admits she knew very little about it.

Mrs. Shaffer's first efforts were Satsuma oranges and her success is shown by a grove of 4,500 trees.

Five years ago she became interested in tung trees and planted one of the first groves in this section. Tung trees produce the nuts from which is extracted a vegetable oil, used extensively by paint and varnish manufacturers.

Mrs. Shaffer has developed groves of pecan, Japanese persimmon, blueberries and pears. There are 10,000 trees on the developed 160 acres of her land.

SWEDISH COLONY FOUNDING
TO BE CELEBRATED

Wilmington, Del. (AP)—Plans are underway to celebrate in 1938 the tercentary of the birth of New Sweden with federal, Swedish and several state governments participating.

Eighteen years after Pilgrims first set foot on Plymouth rock, another group of settlers—the Swedes—landed on the fertile banks of a calm river 300 miles to the south and took possession of the country in the name of the Swedish crown.

Thus was founded the colony of New Sweden that existed in its own right from 1638 until 1655 and left a lasting impression on the culture and government of Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Foremost in the aims of those in charge of the celebration is acquisition for park purposes of the landing place of the pioneers.

Last year there were a pair of the fleet little animals but hunters and trappers reported that this winter only one remains.

Settlement of the valley and surrounding country was responsible for the extermination of the antelope herds.

Ward Store in Hanover to Add
12,000 Square Feet of Space

Work was started last week on the remodeling and modernization of the entire Montgomery Ward and company store at Hanover. According to company officials, the building alterations will provide approximately 12,000 additional square feet of selling space on three floors and will greatly increase the lines and variety of merchandise the new store will carry. Preliminary construction work is under way and within the next 10 days workmen will begin the major part of the building revisions.

New stairways will be added; a new basement sales floor will be provided; departments will be relocated and enlarged; several new departments will be added; additional second floor space for the furniture, rugs and stove departments will be provided by extending the present store building from Frederick street to Exchange Place; an outside fire escape from the second floor will be constructed; new fireproof partitions will be built around all stairways; comfort facilities will be added; an improved battery and tire service station will be constructed at the rear of the store, and general repairs and painting improvements will be made throughout the store.

According to C. O. Barr, manager of the Hanover Ward store, new light-colored walnut fixtures will replace the store's present equipment and all features of modern, practical and efficient department store layout developed by the Ward company will be employed. In addition to the increased size of all departments of the proposed store, every item of arrangement has been carefully planned for efficient service. Merchandise will be arranged and displayed for ease of selection and more complete varieties as well as new lines of merchandise will be added to each department in the store.

The general layout of the new store will be arranged with furniture, stoves and rugs located on the second floor; wearing apparel for the entire family will occupy the first floor; the offices will be moved to the mezzanine floor and a complete hardware store with sporting goods, tires, building supplies, paints, farm equipment, electrical appliances, etc., will be located in the new basement.

Several additional department managers and salespeople are being trained for the new positions the larger plan will require and it is expected that the larger store will employ a considerable number of new full-time and part-time salespeople.

The store, during the last fall and Christmas season, has had up to 85 full-time and extra salespeople on its payroll. It was pointed out that the Hanover store has just closed a highly successful year with a number of new sales records having been established in 1936. The steadily increasing volume of the store and the company's confidence in the stability of this section as a shopping center indicated the need for one of the newest type of a Ward unit for this locality.

According to present plans the store will be closed for a few weeks during the peak of the alteration work and will re-open during the early part of March. A definite closing date has not yet been announced, according to W. C. Richards, field construction superintendent in charge of the alteration work. Business will be conducted as usual until a definite closing time is announced.

ESCAPE IF YOU CAN

BY FREDERICK JACKSON

SYNOPSIS: Bigelow, young American-born Parisian, comes to New York at his aunt's request to check on a Count Vronski whom her step-daughter Anne may marry. Anne proves a charming, independent girl. They arrange a dinner party, including Vronski and Karsanoff, the stunning Russian dancer whom Bigelow met on the ship. She had shown a veiled interest when he mentioned Vronski. As the two Russians meet, Bigelow is sure Karsanoff recognizes the count. At the night club, Vronski rudely neglects Anne to chat in Russian with the dancer.

Chapter Eight

Murder At The Studio

Bigelow wondered what game Karsanoff was playing. He had interpreted that guarded look in her eyes when she had first glimpsed Vronski as an indication that she disliked or distrusted him. But had it meant that? Might not her excitement have been due to another cause altogether and the guarded look only an attempt to conceal her exultation? Might not the jewels she had mentioned be responsible for her keen interest in the man—those famous Vronski jewels about which she had so swiftly questioned him?

As the dance ended and they separated, a girl leaned forward from a table nearby and called out, "Don't forget you are lurching with me tomorrow, darling!"

"Colony at one," nodded Anne. "Those are the Drydens," she murmured to Bigelow as they went back toward their own table. He had the impression of a piquant dark face. The man at the table, he did not notice at all. Afterward, he was sorry about that.

Their table was deserted. Karsanoff and Vronski were gone. "Probably in the bar," said Anne. "The bottle here appears to be empty and with this crowd, the service can't be very quick."

As they sat down, the waiter arrived with their next course, but Karsanoff and Vronski did not come back.

"Tell me about yourself—your life in Paris?" urged Anne.

He talked more to distract her than to dispense information. . . . When Karsanoff and Vronski headed toward the table, Bigelow asked Anne to dance again. He had been watching for them and saw them in good time. Anne had seen them, too, and saw through the maneuver, but she made no comment. And this went on throughout the evening. Vronski did not once linger at the table to ask Anne to dance. He spent most of his time with Karsanoff at the bar.

But at one o'clock, when Anne was thinking about going home, Vronski and Karsanoff appeared bearing tidings.

"We are having a party," cried Vronski. "I have already asked people. I knew you would be charmed." He was flushed and a little drunk.

"A party?" repeated Anne. "When?"

"Now. At once. At your studio," explained Vronski.

"I am indeed charmed," said Anne rather dryly. "Let's go, then."

She rose, gathering up her bags and her cigarette case. The others followed her lead. . . . Bigelow thought that Karsanoff was regarding Anne sympathetically. She had not been drinking, apparently.

In the car again, Vronski spoke to Karsanoff in Russian.

"Please—" cried Karsanoff. "I like to make perfect my English. Besides when you speak Russian the others cannot understand."

"That is why I speak it," answered Vronski laughing. "Anne will not mind. We shall go our own ways even after we marry. It is—your understanding—a marriage of convenience. Her convenience as much as mine." And he laughed again. They all glanced at Anne.

"You can see what a convenient husband Count Vronski would make," said Anne, with a smile. But Bigelow noted that she did not deny his insinuation that they were to marry.

"If I Have To Kill Him"

Anne's studio in 55th street was over some shops. The house was in darkness as they drove up, but Anne dismissed the car for the night and let them in with her latch-key.

Leaving the front door open for the guests who would be arriving, and the light in the hallway on, they mounted the stairs. The top floor belonged to Anne, and it was a roomier place than one might have imagined from outside.

There was first, the studio—a working studio—with a huge skylight and all a painter's equipment about it. It was rather scantily furnished with a couple of big couches, a table, a writing desk and a few chairs, but there were dozens of pictures. Next to the studio, was a bedroom, beautifully done in green and silver, and beyond that, a luxuriously appointed bath. Beyond the bath was a large, well appointed kitchen. And the rooms as well as opening into one another, also opened into the small hall that ran from the studio to the kitchen.

Anne switched on the lights and ushered them through, beaming at their approval.

"It is a comfortable little place," she admitted with pride. "My very own pied a terre. . . . Make yourselves comfortable, won't you, while I go and consider the question of food and drink."

"I'll order food sent in," said Vronski, "if you can manage the drink."

"I think so," said Anne. "I'll see." "I'll come and help, too, if I may," said Bigelow. He followed Anne into the kitchen. Karsanoff remained in the studio looking at the examples of Anne's work as Vronski went to the telephone on the desk.

In the kitchen, Anne opened cupboards and began to set out bottles and glasses. Bigelow lent a hand. "So you are going to marry him," said Bigelow, breaking a long silence.

Anne turned and looked at him. "I am not going to marry him," she said with sudden intensity, "if I have to kill him to escape."

He stared at her, startled. "He has some hold on you," he cried, grasping the truth, at last. "Yes. Isn't it obvious? I should have thought you would have guessed. Otherwise I shouldn't have spoken."

"Letters?" asked Bigelow, quietly. He had gone very pale and his eyes were burning.

"Yes." A faint color rose in her cheeks and she dropped her lashes. "Don't think any more about it," said Bigelow, then. "I'll deal with him."

Anne caught her breath. "No!" she cried fiercely.

"You don't trust me to handle the matter?"

"Of course, I trust you. It isn't that. I got into this mess. And I'm going to get out of it. There's no earthly reason for you to become involved."

"But—I am involved," said Bigelow gravely.

She stared at him. "You mustn't be. I shall handle this myself in my own way. I should never have mentioned it. I was a fool. Promise me you will keep out of it—do nothing. Promise me!"

"I can't promise," said Bigelow. She bit her lip. "Listen," she said then grimly. "I am quite capable of looking after myself. And I don't want any outside interference. It's very kind and chivalrous of you to offer and I appreciate your good intentions, but please don't meddle. This is my own business, after all, and I prefer to manage it in my own way. Is that clear?"

"Quite clear," said Bigelow slowly.

She turned and dashed into the bathroom, slamming the door.

Bigelow continued for a moment or two, mechanically taking down glasses. Then he stopped, staring before him with frowning brows. . . .

A Shot, A Scream, Darkness

Suddenly, there came the sound of a shot. It seemed to come from the studio. And an instant afterward, all the lights in the apartment went out. A woman screamed—but whether it was Anne or Karsanoff, Bigelow could not guess.

When the lights went on again, they were all in the studio. Anne stood with her hand still on the light-switch, but her face was colorless and her eyes were fixed with a kind of horrified fascination on the floor. Karsanoff stood in the doorway leading from the bedroom. Her eyes, too, were on the floor but her face was enigmatic. Bigelow stood in the doorway leading in from the hall. And near the center of the big room, lay the crumpled figure of Vronski. He had been shot through the heart and he was dead. The automatic that had killed him lay on the floor beside him.

But it was not suicide—Bigelow knew that. One of them had killed him. But which?

Madame Karsanoff was the first of the three to recover from the shock of the discovery—if indeed she had felt any sense of shock. Without a noticeable change of expression, she advanced slowly to Vronski's body and knelt down on the floor beside it, examining it critically without actually touching it.

"Is he—dead?" asked Anne in a hoarse whisper.

"Yes. He is quite dead," answered Karsanoff, nodding her head. "He died instantly, I think."

She looked up through narrowed lids—first at Anne, then at Bigelow, waiting.

"If we call the police," said Bigelow, "it means a scandal—and certainly the arrest of—one of us three."

Anne caught her breath sharply. Karsanoff studied him as though her eyes sought to see into his secret thoughts.

"They will arrest me of course," said Anne. "That is my gun."

"Yours?" repeated Karsanoff, looking at it.

"Yes. It was in the bed-stand next to my bed. I kept it—for protection, you know. I spent so much time here alone—"

Low Kidnap Record Of 1936 Marred by Mattson Abduction

Washington, Jan. 13 (AP).—The Mattson kidnapping case occurred at the end of a year relatively free of kidnapping activity.

Only once in 1936 was the federal kidnap law involved—in the abduction of William T. Turnbull, a New Jersey state trooper. On November 11 Turnbull was carried across the New Jersey state line by two men said by federal agents to be Merle Vandebush and Harry Brunette.

The two had been stopped by Turnbull for speeding near Somerville, New Jersey.

The trooper was thrown from the car on a lonely mountain road in Pennsylvania, bound but uninjured. Brunette subsequently was captured by federal agents in New York city. Vandebush still is at large.

Earlier in the year an unidentified woman stole 20-month-old Harry (Buddy) Browne, of Detroit, from his perambulator. The baby has not been found, but federal agents privately have expressed doubt any federal law was violated. (The so-called Lindbergh kidnap law is enforceable only against kidnapers who cross State lines.)

MAROONS WIN FROM HERSHEY

Foul Shots by Stanley Help Locals to Extra-Period Win, 23-22.

Gettysburg high school's basketball team bounded back into the thick of the fight for the championship of the Southern Pennsylvania interscholastic league by noosing out the highly-touted Hershey high five in a thrilling extra-period game here Tuesday evening, 23-22.

It marked the second time in as many starts that the Maroons have been forced to play an extra-period game on their new court.

A foul shot by Stanley in the last few seconds of the extra period gave the Forney-men their winning margin after the score had stood at 22-all.

The game was one of the closest staged here in a long time, the score being deadlocked many times. Neither team could secure more than a four-point lead at any stage of the game.

After Hershey had taken a 6-5 lead in the first period the Maroons deadlocked the score at 9-all at half time. At the close of the third period the score was knotted at 15-15.

Maroons Rally

The fourth period was a wild and exciting affair. With less than three minutes to go, Hershey secured the biggest lead of the evening when it went out in front 21-17. Martin and Wright came through with field goals to tie the score. Less than a minute remained when a foul toss was awarded to Stanley which he converted to give the Maroons the lead.

In a wild scramble, during which frequent shots at the basket rolled off the basket, Guerardini, Hershey forward, was awarded a pair of charity shots, the first of which he made good to again tie the score and send the game into an extra period. Guerardini's shot was made with but four seconds to play.

Neither team could locate the basket in the first two minutes of play during the extra period. About 15 seconds of play remained when Stanley was fouled and again he came through to put the locals out in front. The Maroons successfully stalled for time and the game ended.

On Friday evening the Maroons will play Chambersburg high at Chambersburg in another league tilt.

PRESIDENTIAL ACTION SPURS KIDNAP HUNT

Tragedy Area Combed Closely for Trail of Mattson Boy's Killer.

Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 13 (AP).—Man hunters, spurred by public wrath and Presidential action, pursued an almost microscopic search of the Everett area Tuesday night for the trail of little Charles Mattson's kidnaper-killer.

Spreading out from the spot where the boy's savagely-beaten, nude and frozen body was found Monday in the snow, they scanned every foot of the country in a three-mile radius.

Sheriff Walter Faulkner, at Everett, said a report the victim's clothing had been found in an abandoned automobile there had proved without foundation. He said the clothing belonged to the car owner's family.

Science Aids Hunters

Science gave the determined hunters a cast of the footprints and a record of automobile tire marks left in the snow by the killer.

Public indignation accompanied President Roosevelt's call for speedy apprehension of the criminal. The justice department posted a $10,000 reward for arrest of the killer, while Washington state legislators prepared to offer a $5,000 reward.

The grief-stricken family of Dr. W. M. Mattson arranged for the funeral at 1 p. m. this afternoon in a Tacoma mortuary.

"The murder of the little Mattson boy has shocked the nation," said the President. The justice department announced the $10,000 reward offer.

"Every means at our command must be enlisted to capture and punish the perpetrator of the ghastly crime," the President said.

Washington state legislators considered the posting of a $5,000 reward. Bernarr Macfadden, magazine publisher, announced he would pay $1,000 for apprehension of the killer.

Death for the killer appeared certain. Both the federal and Washington state laws permit infliction of the death penalty for both kidnapping and murder.

"Ghost House" Stirs With Goings-On Just As Strange As Its 160 Rooms

By SAM JACKSON
San Jose, Calif. (AP)—Having spent 13 years in the Winchester "ghost house," Custodian John R. Brown and his wife say they are experiencing phenomena they can't explain.

When they moved into the weird 160-room structure in 1923, the Browns scoffed at the idea the spirit of its owner, Mrs. Sarah Pardee Winchester, of the rifle-manufacturing family, would cause them any trouble. Nor were they afraid of the floating faces and detached hands which a parlor maid declared materialized around Mrs. Winchester.

Many mediums asked permission to hold seances, but the Browns turned them down and have been exhibiting the house merely as an architectural monstrosity.

Footsteps In The Dark
But now, after the 13th year—"There have been footsteps going through the house at night," says Brown. "I get up and search and I can't find anything. It's happened time and again."

"Something keeps unlatching the door. One day it happened three times—unlatched from the inside when I was the only person in the house."

"People think they hear voices in her old bedroom," says Mrs. Brown, "but we just hustle them along."

Knows Of No Attraction
Brown thinks of nothing that would attract human prowlers. It is true that obituaries stated Mrs. Winchester's $20,000,000 fortune had shrunk at her death to $4,000,000, but Brown does not believe any of the vanished money is hidden on the estate. "She handled her money by checks," he says.

The income from what was left went to eight nephews and nieces, the residuary estate to the New York Hospital association.

"Llanada Villa," as Mrs. Winchester called the place, was under construction continuously for 36 years.

Sought Eternal Life
Her husband, William Wirt Winchester, son of the founder of the Winchester Arms company, died in Hartford in 1886. According to lo-counties in the 4-H club groups, making a total of 139 owners and exhibitors.

The large number of exhibitors in proportion to the number of cattle is a unique feature of the Pennsylvania show.

The Pennsylvania farm show provides exceptional facilities for caring for dairy cattle, and this dairy cattle exhibit held in mid-winter is attracting nation-wide attention.

Vegetables

ADAMS county growers who are planning to exhibit vegetables at the Pennsylvania farm show are reminded by County Agent M. T. Hartman that their entries must be at the show by 8 a. m., Monday, January 18.

Four classes of vegetables will be shown.

The first is a display of a variety of vegetables attractively arranged.

Another class is for green-house grown vegetables, such as leaf lettuce in commercial pack, two pounds of tomatoes, six bunches of radishes and three bunches of rhubarb.

There is a class for mushrooms, white, cream and brown, with fancy and buttons in each.

In the remaining class one-half bushel commercial packs of many kinds of roots, as well as cabbage, celery, pumpkins, and squash may be shown.

There also is a class for students of vocational agriculture to enter beets, carrots, onions, parsnips, cabbage, and sweet potatoes.

Livestock

A LARGE exhibit of fine livestock will be displayed at the farm show next week.

Sheep of nine different breeds have been entered. These include 352 head in the open classes of breeding and fat sheep and 168 head of fat lambs in the 4-H classes. The club entries represent 11 counties: Berks, Blair, Centre, Clinton, Dauphin, Fayette, Northampton, Schuylkill, Susquehanna and Washington.

Beef cattle exhibits will include 96 head in the breeding classes representing the three major breeds. There also will be 99 baby beefs shown by 4-H club boys and girls of 10 counties: Chester, Cumberland, Dauphin, Lancaster, Lebanon, Lehigh, Mercer, Montgomery, Northampton and York.

In the horse classes 80 Percherons and Belgians will be shown. Approximately 250 head of swine will be exhibited by adults and vocational agriculture students. The five major breeds will be represented.

"The spirits ordered it," they explained.

A niece, Margaret Mariot, was the only person to share the singular builder's company. Mrs. Winchester hid even from most of her servants and often wore a veil. "Scarcely half a dozen persons have seen her in as many years," said a news story appearing in 1908.

President Theodore Roosevelt, who tried to call on her, was not even admitted to the grounds.

The resulting operations, which continued until she died in 1922 at the age of 85, are estimated by Brown to have cost her $3,000,000.

The structure's 160 rooms contain hundreds of doors, windows and cabinets, 47 fireplaces and 40 stairways. Some features are strange in the extreme. Stairs lead into a blank wall, into a cupboard or a useless balcony. A hall has four fireplaces side by side. Three other fireplaces are built one above another on a single chimney.

There are five kitchens, three elevators. One staircase has 44 steps and makes 10 turns to attain an elevation of 10 feet. Ornamental posts are installed upside down. Costly stained glass windows and doors with trick knobs open onto blank walls.

Much Work Torn Out
The motif 13 is repeated again and again in the paneling.

Neighbors who watched the work said several times as many rooms were built and destroyed as now survive. A marquetry floor it took three years to lay was ripped up the day after completion.

Kansas farmers, who harvested only 75 per cent of the wheat acreage planted last year, have seeded 16,500,000 acres—the largest acreage in the history of the state—for 1937.

Biglerville Company to Erect New Building to Can Cherries

IN AN effort to meet the demands of Adams county's ever increasing cherry crop, officials of the C. H. Musselman company, Biglerville, have announced their intentions of erecting a new building for the sole purpose of treating and canning cherries.

The new building will be erected this spring and will be situated between the present plants and warehouse. Previously the cherry work was done in a cramped section of the present plant.

The type of the new structure will follow the policy of the Musselman company in being a one-story building. It will be constructed of a combination of cement, steel and wood.

The work will be finished in time for the 1937 cherry crop.

Kills Wife and Two Children, Dies by Jumping Under Train

Head of Washington Family Wounds Daughter and Man Friend After Clubbing and Shooting Others to Death in House.

Washington, Jan. 13 (AP).—An elderly man gone suddenly mad killed three members of his family with a hammer and pistol Tuesday night, wounded two others, and threw himself in front of a speeding freight train. He was ground to death.

Detectives who rushed to the home of the man, Corbin Boorman, 65, a retired telephone company employe, could not establish a motive for the wholesale killing immediately.

Besides Boorman, police listed the dead as:

His wife, Frances, 60.
A son, Francis, 21.
A daughter, Margaret, 26.

The scene of the killing was the Boorman home, on the Queens Chapel road, Maryland, about one hundred yards from the District of Columbia line.

As police reconstructed the tragedy, Boorman attacked his wife in the dining room, killed her with hammer blows on the head, then shot his son to death in the kitchen.

The son's body was found amid the debris of shattered plates and broken furniture. The daughter was last to die, trapped in the cellar.

Later, police said, Boorman encountered a 24-year-old daughter, Mary, and a friend, James Ryan, in the yard of the home and shot at them. The girl suffered a wound in the arm, and Ryan was rushed to Sibley hospital with a wound in his face.

The next chapter of the story was told by the engineer of a Baltimore and Ohio freight train. He said that as his train neared the corner of Michigan avenue and Tenth street in the northeast section of Washington, a man hurled himself in front of it.

The train mangled the body so badly that identification proved difficult. However, police announced that they had definitely established the man was Boorman.

A Bible in the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Farrar in Waxahachie, Texas, has been in Mrs. Farrar's family for 225 years. It was brought from Scotland in 1774.

READING and WRITING

Some time ago the editor of a certain publishing house told a friend of mine that his firm took no books, whether novel or non-fiction, for which it had not previously made overtures. This is perhaps not a policy which offers much to unknown writers, but the publishing situation makes it thoroughly understandable.

This house has published a book recently which obviously was written to order. Its name is "365 Days," and its editor is (of all the choices!) Kay Boyle. The idea was to choose a year, in this case 1934, and assign each person a day and an allotment of 300 words. In these 300 words the writer was supposed to crystallize the spirit of what happened—or something like that.

Nobody can deny that the idea is brilliantly original and that done perfectly, the result might be a unique book of great value. But several things are wrong, the first of them the editor.

Kay Boyle is an expatriate American whose gift is to catch and put on paper the tenuous emotional reactions of occasionally rather precious people. She does this cleverly. But the job of molding such a book as "365 Days" is another sort of job. She simply does not realize the necessity for strength and solidity nor does she have the eye for panoramic effect. And when, in her introduction, she writes: "If there is a thing I want to go back to America for, it is to see the lizards red as leather," she proves this fact.

Secondly, I do not believe there are many persons capable of saying what the publisher wanted them to say in 300 words, excepting a few newspaper men. The limit is too low, although longer articles would have made the book too long. And this brings us to the final point, which is that careful search through the newspaper files of the New York public library would have produced the articles required, if anything would, Miss Boyle would not have recognized them, but probably the publisher would. Or James T. Farrell, who is one of the contributors, "365 Days," edited by Kay Boyle (Harcourt, Brace).

OUT SINCE LAST APRIL, CHILDREN BACK IN SCHOOL

West Orange, N. J., Jan. 13 (AP). — The Bongart brothers reported for school Tuesday—the first time since last April.

Under a suspended $5 fine for keeping their sons out of school and tutoring them at home, Mr. and Mrs. Benno Bongart avoided additional fines of $25 a day by having William, 12, and Robert, 11, report to Solomon C. Strong, school superintendent.

Their parents took them from school last April, charging the principal had struck William. Judge Joseph Siegler, in juvenile court at Newark, adjudged the parents disorderly persons under the school act and imposed the sentence.

Highway Patrolmen To Get New Uniforms

The state highway patrol will get new uniforms.

The patrolmen will appear in about three weeks clad in new red and blue outfits, Capt. Charles H. Quarles, superintendent, has announced.

"The outfits will be a complete departure from anything the patrol has used since its inception," Quarles said.

The reason for the change from the severe, drab gray outfits:

"They will create within the mind of the patrolmen a greater respect for neatness, orderliness and discipline."

"Men get tired of wearing the same old thing all the time."

"It's just like getting rid of your dingy old car and getting a shiny new one; it makes you feel better."

"Give a workman good tools and he'll do a better job."

Quarles said the troopers are being measured now by a Philadelphia uniform company.

Veteran St. John's Team Here Tonight

Gettysburg college's courtmen are expected to receive stiff opposition tonight when the veteran St. John's college passers of Annapolis, Maryland, will be met on the college court. The game will start at 8 o'clock.

Last year St. John's entered the playoffs for the olympics and although beaten by the powerful Pitt quintet, gave a good account of itself. Practically the same team represents the Marylanders again this season.

Elon scored a 31-23 victory over St. John's Tuesday evening.

WAKE UP AND LOAF! IS SAVANT'S MESSAGE

Paris, Jan. 13 (AP). — Strenuous persons who leap out of bed as soon as they wake are impairing their health, the French academy of medicine was assured Tuesday.

Dr. Maurice Auguste Boileau, eminent physiologist, in a paper before the learned academy, said it was necessary to remain in bed 20 minutes after waking so the blood circulation, which slows up during sleep, can return to normal.

THE COLD SHOULDER

Easton, Pa. (AP). — Henry E. Hathaway, Berks county weatherman, has no patience with the "Blizzard Club," his name for elderly individuals who scoff at modern snow storms and "exaggerate" those of earlier decades. Hathaway predicts the winter of 1936-37 will bring more snowfall than 1858, which most old-timers cite as the year of "the big blizzard." The weatherman based his prediction for this year on lack of moisture in the ground early in the season.

KEEP COOKY DOUGH SOFT

Sues Over 'Panties'

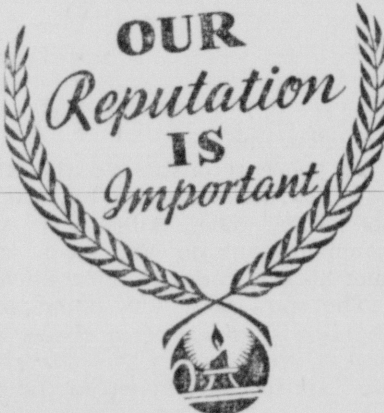

Charging false arrest for the theft of a pair of "lucky panties" and $160, Miss Victoria Siwiec (above), Detroit hotel maid, asked $10,000 damages in a suit filed against Miss Jean Dalrymple, secretary to Jose Iturbi, symphony conductor. Miss Dalrymple, crediting the "panties" for good luck in surviving a plane wreck, made them her "lucky piece." (Associated Press Photo)

Uncover Clues in N. Y. Tub Slaying

New York, Jan. 13 (AP). — Confident that the powerful, dark-haired "bathtub" slayer of Mary Robinson Case, pretty, college-bred advertising model, had betrayed himself, 100 seasoned detectives engaged Tuesday night in a relentlessly methodical search for him.

Mrs. Case, bride of little more than a year, was strangled and bludgeoned to death after a wild struggle in her Jackson Heights apartment in Queen Monday afternoon while her husband was at work.

The husband, Frank W. Case, 30, an executive of the American Hotel association, found her semi-nude body in an overflowing bathtub when he hurried home after being unable to raise her on the telephone.

Tuesday night the immediate objective of investigators was to trace a frayed and bloodstained pair of brown tweed trousers which were found in the basement incinerator of the apartment.

Honolulu (AP). — In case you'd rather have a hairless variety of rats and mice around the house, here's how to get them. Dr. Oscar C. Magistad, director of the U. BIGLER LOSES ON FOUL SHOTS

Girls' Team Wins 4th Straight Over North York Tuesday Evening.

Poor marksmanship from the foul line proved fatal to the Biglerville high school boys' basketball team who dropped a 22-20 decision to the North York high cagers on the latter's court Tuesday evening. The upper countians tallied but four of 15 foul attempts.

In the preliminary game the undefeated Biglerville girls won their fourth straight by a decisive 35-8 verdict.

Coach Bernard Thrush's boys trailed 12-8 at half time and tried desperately to rally in the last half but their inability to score on free throws thwarted each attempt.

Dill, Weikert and Taylor shared the scoring honors in the preliminary game. The Biglerville girls secured an early lead and were never headed.

Biglerville will be host to Fairfield high in the opening Adams county league game Friday evening.

TULLE SASHES ARE BRIGHT

FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders for Adams County Farmers From State College.

Attend State Show

Farm plans for next week will include a visit to the Pennsylvania farm show at Harrisburg. More than 10,000 exhibits will be housed in the big 10-acre show building. There will be 7,500 cash awards amounting to $39,213. Forty-one organizations cooperate in this great winter exposition and most of them will have business and educational meetings during the week.

Delicious Is Good Apple

Delicious is very popular as a dessert apple, especially with those who prefer a very mild sort. It is not considered good for cooking because of this mildness. It ripens in October and may be readily held through January and two months longer under best storage conditions, say Penn State fruit specialists.

New Flower Chosen

Among the 1937 all-American flower selections is Crown-of-Gold marigold. This is the first known marigold with odorless foliage, according to Penn State floriculturists. The flowers are orange-colored, early, and about two and one-half inches in diameter. The plant stands two and one-half feet tall.

Keep Houses Uniform

Overheated poultry houses are not conducive to high summer egg production; nor are cold, clammy houses in winter. Rapid temperature changes are most detrimental. To insure uniform conditions or gradual changes, the house should be tightly constructed, with insulated walls and ceiling, say Penn State agricultural engineers.

Farm Records Necessary

A farm business without some kind of records is like a clock without hands. You cannot tell whether it is gaining or losing, nor even where it stands at any one time. It pays to keep farm accounts, say State college farm management specialists.

Farm Life Is Varied

The life of the farmer is a varied life, and not a monotonous grind. Life on the farm is a family life where children and parents all work together.

AMUSEMENTS

Majestic Theatre

William Powell and Myrna Loy, step from the last thrilling page of "The Thin Man" into the first chapter of the sequel millions have demanded be written, "After the Thin Man," which shows Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Majestic theatre.

"After the Thin Man" is more than just another sequel. It picks up where "The Thin Man" left off. Nick and Nora, having conquered New York, are on their way home to bustling, cosmopolitan San Francisco with its colorful, eerie Chinatown, its energetic ferries and its magnificent bridges.

Nick has put his sleuthing career in moth balls for good. He and Nora want nothing but lots of peace, quiet and relaxation. It is New Year's eve when they arrive at the door of their swank Nob Hill home.

And they walk right into a whoopee party. Half of San Francisco, society, policemen, bums, race track touts, ex-pugs and underworld friends, have dropped in to welcome them home.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams
ABOUT WANTS

PROBABLY the greatest food that you can feed to arouse enthusiasm is wants. We do extra things, toil long and late, make sacrifices, and get tired backs and aching legs, as well as weary brains—because we have wants.

In my youth in Chicago, I became acquainted with Blon J. Arnold, a great electrical engineer and an inspiring man. One day I met him on the street in New York and we were talking about that popular topic—success. Suddenly he turned to me and said: "I attribute my success to the fact that I made myself want things until it hurt!"

It's a foolish thing to envy those who seem to have everything. They lack the joy of having wants.

The prime requisite for a job is to want a job. The next is to want the job that you want most. The tragedy about all unemployment is that there are those willing to work who cannot get work. The economic problem is to so work out things that they may have the chance to work.
There are, however, in every city, and throughout the land, thousands of jobs that want the right kind of a man—the kind who wants that job with all his heart.

Employers are not turning away applicants for a job in their concerns where the applicants want that job more than the employer wants to give it to them!

No one can have too many wants just so long as their multitude does not bring about discouragement. It's a good thing to want one thing at a time—but want that one thing so hard that you get it. It is far better, also, to want a thing and go after it—even though you fail to gain it—than to want for nothing and get what you don't want! Too many people are going through the latter experience right now.

Wants, after all, are a perpetual inspiration. They stimulate the imagination and stir the blood. Wants should not be neglected. It is important, however, to train to gain them. It has long been an axiom that the more a man gets the more he wants. But that is not particularly dangerous so long as a man uses his gains to a good purpose. It is true that wants fulfilled arouse additional wants.

People want for money, power, fame and acclaim—but the finest want for anyone to pursue is to want to be useful.

THE NEW YEAR

I LIKE the phrase "ever changing, though never changing." I used it once in a talk to illustrate the beauty of a diamond that I used to wear —to the time when I was held up and lost it. Since then I have had no desire to own diamonds! But I used to look at it time and again and marvel at its ever changing beauty—though it was always the same. Its structure never changed.

We go into a New Year. It's always thrilling—but though it may be looked upon by many as "just another year" it really is not—it's new in a thousand respects. It's new in opportunity. It's new in possible adventure and growth. It's new in its spread-out drama, challenging the imagination and courage of us all. It's new in spiritual promise.

Into this New Year, at our front doorstep, will flow more new ideas, more new inventions, more hope—let us firmly believe—than at the inception of any year in history. In the largest, and truest sense, we are each a part of a co-operative whole, and it is the duty of government, and of us all to play our part in making a decent chance for all to be happy.

How inspiring is that phrase—Happy New Year! Bitterness, disappointment, and the memory of shattered illusions, take a backward stride when that is uttered. Following the Christmas season of "peace on earth, good will to men," it warms people's hearts, and suggests the theme for the new little fellow about to be born, so as to make it a glad New Year.

The new leaf—clean and white—how many of us think about it, and resolve to put on that page something that will stand worthy for the eyes of the world.

There is something of an example to the entire world in the phrase the United States of America. What a world this would be if there could but be a United States of Europe, or of the world, for that matter, instead of the intrigue and exploitation that are now promising a wrecked foreign civilization, which cannot help but bring sadness and a measure of despair to all mankind.

The daily resolve is what we all need to incorporate into our consciousness, not merely a few resolves to die as the New Year grows up.
And that resolve should be for each of us to make it a better year, not only for ourselves, but for all with whom we come in contact. And what a spreading thing influence is! A happy New Year to you—all the way through.

Winter's Cold Fails to Destroy The Mountain Laurel's Beauty

Glossy Evergreen Leaves Color Landscape as Other Plants Wither; Thrives in Home Garden but Calls for Close Care.

By GISELA GRIMM

(In the New York Herald Tribune)
The mountain laurel (Kalmia latifolia) is considered by many the most beautiful of all native flowering shrubs. Growing wild on rocky hillsides and in wooded ravine, it is the delight of the motorist in the mountainous sections of the eastern states at all seasons, but particularly in winter and during its period of bloom in May and June.

The mountain laurel usually attains a height of about five feet, but may sometimes grow as high as eight or 10. Its habit of growth is pleasing; the stout, forked stems forming a round, compact head.
The thick, leathery leaves, three to four inches long and about one-half inch wide, are a beautiful glossy green above and a greenish yellow below. Winter cold does not mar their beauty.

The rosy flower buds begin to expand in early spring. The individual flowers are oddly attractive.
They are flat or cup-shaped, with the stamens caught in the corolla springing up as the flower opens and scattering the pollen. The flowers shade from deep rose to pure white and are borne in showy clusters about four inches across.

The praises of this glorious shrub hardly can be sung too loudly. It is popular with every one who sees it, and yet unthinking people ruthlessly break the flowers and mar the beauty of the shrubs in their native habitat. Often the plants are dug from the woods and transferred to unsuitable locations on the home grounds, where they rapidly die. In some regions the evergreen leaves are used to fashion garlands for street and church decorations at Christmas time. The efforts of the garden clubs have helped to check its wholesale destruction, and it is to be hoped that within a few years this plant will receive the protection it deserves.

Likes Acid Soil

The mountain laurel, rightly used, may be a beautiful addition to the planting of the home grounds. It is splendid for massing along long drives with a background of pines or hemlocks, often its companions in the wild state. Sometimes a semi-shaded location near the house affords the opportunity to grow the mountain laurel successfully. Again, it may be made at home in the shaded rock garden or wild garden.

However, it is a mistake to plant the mountain laurel about the home unless soil conditions are suitable for its healthy growth. This plant is a member of the Heath family (Ericaceae), to which the huckleberries, azaleas and rhododendrons also belong. They are lovers of an acid soil and will die if planted in the sweet, garden soil in which most flowers and flowering shrubs survive.

The mountain laurel in particular average of recent Monday runs. A few steers carrying sufficient gain and quality to get into the good grade were included, but most offerings ranged over the extremes of medium grade. Other classes were generally normal in distribution. Trade developed rather slowly. At the opening sellers were again asking steeper to higher prices, but the buying side were constant in lower price objectives and the trade on steers worked out about 182c, lower than on last Thursday. A few heifers looked steady to weak. Cows sold mostly to weak, while bulls were in fairly broad demand and sold fully steady.

Pork of the steers were medium grades scaling 1,000-1,200 pounds and sold at $9.25-9.50. A couple loads of medium weights grading in the upper medium and low good grades went at $10.00-10.25, while a couple part load lots of 1,200-1,250-pound weights were noted at $10.50. Quite a scattering of common and medium grade steers were found at $8.50-9.25; a few common sorts down at $8 and below. A few head of choice steers of common grade cashed around $7. A few lots of common heifers brought $6.60, a scattering of heifers of medium grade good grade making $6.50. Most of the low cutter and cutter cubs brought $4.50-4.75; common and medium cubs $4.75-5.15; a few good cubs at $6 and above. Medium grade beef brought $6.25-6.75, a few good beef bulls up to $7.50, common lightweight bulls $6 and under.

CALVES—Good action developed on calves at fully steady prices. Quality was rather plain as a whole. A few lots of good vealers sold at $13, choice grades being practically closed. Most vealers were common and medium grade lightweight calves that sold at $8.12-8.50; a few cubs down at $7 and under. A few old head of plain weight calves were present, some being salable around $6.75.

PIGS—Action was somewhat slower, in the hog division yesterday and prices generally were around 1c. lower than at the close of last week. Good and choice hampers and pigs scaling 170-225 pounds sold at $11.25-11.50; most $11.50-11.75, while a scattering of heavyweights sold down to $10.25-10.50. Most $10.50-11.00. Slaughter pigs sold unevenly with 120-140-pound weights covering a range of $10.50-10.75, quite a few lots being reported around $10.50-10.60. Lighter weight pigs were salable down to $9.50 and under, according to quality and weights. Good packing hogs turned at $9.50-9.75, a few lightweight hogs up to $10.25 and under. Good stags were salable around $8.25 and under. Some through billing rail hogs sold 10c-12c above quotation.

SHEEP—Trade was not fully established on lambs at this writing. Outlet was quite broad and most interests were talking around fully steady prices, while in a few instances higher prices were asked for choice led western lambs. Best led lambs were held around $11.50 and above, while $11.12-11.25, and choice native lambs sold at $11.12-11.25. Most $11.12-11.25. Slaughter ewes sold fully steady with some good and choice grades at $4.25-4.75, common grade down to $3 and below.
